BYU takes on #3 Long Beach State

Cougars look to remain undefeated, gain right to host conference tournament

BYU's chance to host the conference tournament at stake, the top-ranked men's volleyball team, No. 3 49ers of Long Beach State, will play in the Marriott Center.

The Marriott Center received a bit of a lift in preparation for the match. Permanent holes in the floor so net stands could be inserted, giving the net a stability and making the center an ideal place to play.

BYU's volleyball coach, never a pessimist, wildest dreams do you come true. The Marriott Center will be a place to play volleyball in. Head coach McGown said, "This is the way we will put their 12-0 record to rest. Mountain Pacific Sports Conference, who is 11-1 in the win tonight would be a real challenge. It would be a real challenge for the upper hand in the conference tournament.

BYU's head-to-head advantage is a good chance of host-ship. McGown said, "We have to be patient with these guys," McGown said. "If we get frustrated offensively, we'll lose."

Long Beach State, whose only loss was to No. 12 Pacific on Feb. 27, was the last team to beat the Cougars. It was a 3-0 loss during the 1998 MPSF tournament that ruined BYU's chances of winning the national championship. Some of the players admit that revenge is on their minds.

"The loss will give us more determination," Antonetti said. "It's nice to get another chance to prove that we can beat them."

It is a chance that couldn't come at a better time. The Cougars are coming off a restful trip from Puerto Rico, homeland of Antonetti and setter Hector Lebron. The Cougars played three exhibition matches, and McGown said he hopes that the trip helped the team recharge itself for the rest of the season.

"One reason we took the trip is that we hoped it would give the guys a chance to rest because the season is really long," McGown said. "I don't know if it was a good thing or a bad thing, but we're hoping it was good."

With the Marriott Center completely ready for volleyball play, the Cougars will look to break the single-match attendance record of 14,156 set by BYU a month ago in a 3-1 win over the University of Hawaii.

BYU will host UC at Santa Cruz Saturday in the Smith Fieldhouse at 7 p.m. The Banana Slugs are 3-9 overall this season and are also scheduled to play UVSC during their trip.

Apartment fees irk BYU students

BYU students go to get their deposits for their apartment complexes, they may be surprised to find that fees have taken a bite out of their deposits.

John Rivers, a senior at Riverside, Calif., majoring in Spanish, said, "I was really surprised when I get my deposits back. It's like there's always some fee that I didn't know about," said John Rivers, 23, a senior at Riverside, Calif., majoring in Spanish.

BYU's 1999 Housing Guide says any non-refundable fees must be written into the contract. If a portion of a deposit is made non-refundable in the contract, the payment of fees, it must be so stated in the contract.

When the renter at the time the deposit is made is not the owner, the apartment complexes approached by the students said the complex took a set amount of money from each deposit to cover carpet cleaning. This amount ranged from $12 to $60 per person, but some students doubt how much carpet in their apartments is cleaned.

When moved into our apartment the carpet was clean, but since we've lived here it's just brown and they haven't done anything about it," said Jessica Hardy, 20, a junior from Evanston, Ill., majoring in psychology.

Students think we should have to pay for carpet cleaning because it should be part of the standard upkeep of the apartment. I don't think it's fair that I have to pay," she said.

A representative of Home Pride ChemDry carpet cleaning said his business recommends that apartment complexes clean the carpets every six months, but that isn't necessarily how often owners have them cleaned.

The average cost of cleaning the carpet and upholstery of a three-bedroom apartment with a living room, sofa and loveseat is $153.86, according to the rates of three Provo carpet cleaning companies. Two of the three companies said they offer discounts for apartment complexes.

Yet Cutler Management, which manages Crown Apartments, said it takes $60 out of the security deposit per tenant per year. With six tenants in every apartment, the company receives $360 per apartment. Given the average cost of carpet cleaning, this could leave them with up to $200 excess per apartment if they clean the carpet once a year.

Other common fees apartment complexes charge for are failed cleaning checks, late rent payment, bounced checks, lost keys and cancellation or transfer fees, which are charged when students cancel or sell their contracts to other students.

Liberty Square residents pay an up-front, non-refundable $50 fee along with their deposit when they sign a contract. The owner of Liberty Square, Jack Fuller Jr., said the complex does this for the benefit of students.

"We lowered and took away fees that involved transferring. We get rid of other fees and consolidate them into one to make it more user friendly," Fuller said.

Fuller said when students sign a contract with Liberty Square and then decide not to live there, they create costs.

But some Liberty Square residents think Liberty Square isn't treating them fairly.

"Even though I live here now, to stay in the spring I have to pay another $50 for the processing fee. I'm not real happy about it. It seems like they're just taking advantage of the students," said Kevin

State calls witnesses in Movie Buffs trial

By KATHY OLDHAM

kathy@du2.byu.edu
NewsNet Staff Writer

The jury in the high-profile Movie Buffs trial took a break from watching movies to hear testimony from the prosecution's first witnesses Thursday morning.

The prosecution called four local video store owners to testify about what type of movies they carry in their stores. The state hoped to show the type of videos rented at Movie Buffs are not available in other video stores in Utah County.

Larry Warren Peterman, former general manager of Movie Buffs, is charged with 15 Class A misdemeanor counts of distributing pornography.

The first witness called by the prosecution was Tom Grassley, owner of Partyland video store in Springville. Grassley said he tries to keep offensive material out of his store. He said the majority of his customers are families, and he tries to cater to their wants and needs.

Prosecutors asked Grassley if he carries any of the 15 videos seized from the Movie Buff stores in American Fork and Lehi in October 1996. Grassley said he did not. He said he would get complaints if he carried any of the 15 movies.

"I already get complaints about some R-rated movies," said Grassley, who said he removes movies from his store shelves when he receives complaints.

In cross-examination, defense attorney Randy Spencer showed scenes from three movies found at Partyland. Two of the movies were R-rated, and one was not rated.

Spencer questioned Grassley about the videos' content. He asked Grassley if he thought the movie parts shown were offensive. Although Grassley said he did not find the first movie pornographic, he said he found the other two offensive and would likely pull them from his shelves.

Geneva helps steel bill through House

By MIKI MEEK

miki@du2.byu.edu
NewsNet Staff Writer

Geneva Steel workers were among 300 steel-union members who appeared on the House floor in Washington, D.C., and successfully lobbied for a bill that called for a reduction in low-priced foreign imports on Tuesday.

The voice of the union was the momentum that pushed the bill through the House, said Tamara Browne, a lobbyist for Geneva Steel.

The House supported union member's requests to relieve the troubled steel market with a vote of 289-141 on the Bipartisan Steel Recovery Act. The measure calls for a reduction in foreign imports and the establishment of a program that would monitor amounts of incoming foreign steel for a period of three years.

However, there have been some predictions that the House is as far as the

Bipartisan Steel Recovery Act of 1999

- Reduce the import to the United States of iron ore and steel plates, sheets, pipes, etc.
- Monitor amounts of foreign steel coming into the U.S.
  1. Foreign countries will have to apply for an import notification certificate before their products enter the U.S.
  2. The certificate will specify the expected date of arrival and quantity of expected import.
  3. The Commerce Department will publish all certificates concerning steel imports on a Web site.

bill will get. It faces opposition by both the Senate and the Clinton-Gore administration, Browne said.

The Senate has fewer members than the House and different ideas concerning trade, which will both be difficult factors to overcome, she said.

If the bill does go through the Senate, Browne said it faces a potential presidential veto. The Clinton administration is free-trade oriented and doesn't want to pass a measure that would impede it, she said.

Kelly Hansen, president of the local United Steelworkers of America, said the Clinton-Gore administration has not been responsive to problems in the steel industry.

U.S.-African meeting talks money

WASHINGTON – The first-ever meeting of ministers from 46 African countries and U.S. government officials led by President Bill Clinton agreed Thursday to work together to increase Africa's role in the global economy.

In a wide ranging blueprint, they also pledged to cooperate more closely in areas ranging from agriculture to treatment and prevention of AIDS.

Closing the conference, Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman said the 13-page document adopted by the participants provides "a path for the future."

He said the three days of meetings involving the ministers, eight cabinet members, four agency heads and other U.S. officials, opened possibilities for "a seamless web of cooperation."

The document said long-term trends throughout Africa were encouraging and mentioned economic reforms, progress in consolidating democracy and creating more inclusive societies.

Malaysia orders 64,000 pigs killed

BUKIT PELANDUK, Malaysia – Malaysia ordered the extermination of 64,000 pigs Thursday to prevent more deaths from Japanese encephalitis, a virus that has killed 50 people since October, many in recent weeks.

The government sent 1,400 soldiers and police officers to carry out its orders in the area where the deaths have occurred, a cluster of hog-farming villages 60 miles southeast of the capital, Kuala Lumpur.

Hundreds of villagers have fled their homes, fearing infection from the virus, which is transmitted from pigs to humans by mosquitoes that thrive in swamps and open drains. The disease attacks the brain and causes high fever, muscle and back aches, vomiting and eventual coma.

Schools were closed and shops were shuttered in Bukit Pelanduk and Sungai Nipah. A vaccine exists, and the government has ordered enough for 300,000 people and 500,000 pigs.

China denies stealing nuclear data

WASHINGTON – A Chinese diplomat denied allegations his country stole nuclear weapons data from an American laboratory and blamed Cold War thinking and partisan politics for the charges.

"They are sorry there is no more Soviet Union and they don't know how to act," said He Yafei, a minister-counsel at the Chinese Embassy, of those making the accusations.

The diplomat said the dispute could harm improving relations between the United States and China, and some Chinese scientists are questioning whether to continue scientific exchanges "to advance our knowledge of nuclear science."

The official did not identify anyone, and specifically excluded Sandy Berger, the U.S. national security adviser, who supports closer ties. When asked about the allegations that a Chinese-American scientist provided Beijing with sensitive material, he replied that "nothing of this sort has ever happened."

Motorist blames truck in train crash

BOURBONNAIS, Ill. – A motorist who claims he was directly behind the truck involved in the deadly Amtrak collision said the driver tried to snake through lowered crossing gates and beat the train, a high-level federal source told The Associated Press on Thursday.

The National Transportation Safety Board source, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, said investigators believe the motorist is credible.

Amtrak's chair, Wisconsin Gov. Tommy Thompson, said the train's engineer said the truck driver tried to zigzag his tractor-trailer through the crossing gates after they had come down.

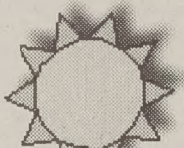

John Goglia of the NTSB said Thursday that there is still no indication the crossing signal malfunctioned. And in a re-enactment of the crash using a truck and locomotive, the truck was able to zigzag around the downed crossing gates without hitting them.

Correction

An article in Thursday's Daily Universe about the Wendy Weaver lawsuit presented incorrect information about the Brown vs. Board of Education decision. The article should have said the doctrine of "separate but equal" was overturned by that decision. The Daily Universe regrets the error.

Utah police arrest L.A. suspect

NewsNet Services

Officers with the Utah County Major Crimes Task Force arrested an Orem man Wednesday who is suspected to have a connection with several attempted homicides in the Los Angeles area, said Lt. Steve Clark from the Utah County Major Crime Task Force, in a news release.

Police arrested Juan Antonio Calzada, 21, after receiving a tip from the Los Angeles Police Department. The LAPD told local officers they believed Calzada was living in the Orem area, Clark said. Calzada is a known gang member and is suspected of having strong gang ties in Utah County, Clark said.

Calzada is a suspect in three August 1998 pedestrian shootings in Los Angeles, Clark said. Police think Calzada came to Orem just after the shootings to avoid arrest.

Calzada was arrested at an Orem apartment complex where police thought he was living. Officers set up a surveillance team and arrested Calzada as he was leaving the complex, Clark said.

IOC budget revealed; Org. worth $136 million

Associated Press

LAUSANNE, Switzerland – In a new sign of openness, the International Olympic Committee released its financial books to the public Thursday and offered a rare peek into the lifestyles of its members.

The IOC's net worth at the end of 1998 was listed as $136 million, according to the audit by PricewaterhouseCoopers.

Cash, bank deposits and television-rights trust funds totaled $237 million, and the committee finished the year with a $40 million operating surplus on income of $86 million.

In addition, the Olympic Foundation – a reserve fund set up in the event of the games being canceled – has $65 million.

The IOC had not issued a unified audit in four years, although its records were available to the public in various forms.

The committee has been under pressure to open its books as part of a reform process in the wake of the Salt Lake City bribery scandal. On Thursday, it released the figures on the Internet.

The IOC said that from now on the audits would be released every two years.

"As soon as it was clear there was world attention to this matter, we released the report," spokesman Franklin Servan-Schreiber said. "We are complying with the best international business practices."

The report showed that the IOC paid $204,000 last year to cover the living expenses of president Juan Antonio Samaranch when he was in Lausanne, Switzerland. Samaranch, who does not receive a salary, lives in a suite at the Lausanne Palace hotel.

Under persistent questioning from reporters, the IOC also disclosed how much its members receive in per diem and other allowances.

Rank-and-file members get $105 a day in Lausanne and $150 elsewhere for expenses other than room and board during IOC meetings, including the games.

Executive board members get $1,000 expense checks for an entire meeting, with all other expenses paid for. The figure had been $500 until this year.

Samaranch described the stipends for executive board members as "pocket money."

Sprunger said the total expenses for executive board members, who meet at least four times a year, totaled $88,000 last year.

The IOC also covers all airfares – first class only for executive board members, and business or first class for the rank-and-file.

TRIAL from page 1

Bonnie Lewis, owner of Top Hat Video in Provo, was the second witness called by the prosecution. Lewis said she and her husband monitor what videos they decide to rent in their store by what they personally think is appropriate and by what they think customers will rent.

"We try not to have any boxes that are offensive to families, regardless of whether a movie is popular or not," said Lewis, who does carry R-rated movies at Top Hat.

Carol Biesinger, owner of Sunrise Family Video in American Fork, said there are no R-rated movies in her store. Sunrise Family Video has received publicity in the past because it offered edited versions of Titanic. Biesinger said she has sold about 5,000 copies of the edited version.

Biesinger said she and her husband decided they didn't want to rent any movies they would not feel comfortable watching if their 14-year old daughter was present.

Joan Arnold, owner of Alpine Video, was the final witness called to testify. Arnold said there are R-rated and NC-17 movies in her store, but she said the NC-17 movies don't rent out very often.

During the afternoon, the jury watched the remaining three videos presented by the state.

N.Y. moot court yields Y wins

By ANDREW JACKSON

NewsNet Staff Writer

Three J. Reuben Clark Law School students earned awards at a national moot court competition last week in New York City.

The group won the Best Team award, and one student won the Best Oralist award.

Maren Daines, Dawn Hendrickson and Jonathan Boyd advanced to the final round after competing against 30 other teams throughout the United States and Canada in a mock appellate court cases. BYU competed in the final round against the Wake Forest School of Law in a mock appellate Supreme Court case focusing on federal securities law.

Boyd, who also won the Best Oralist award, said the BYU team earned more than a couple of awards.

"We wanted to make sure, if we could, that the impression we left with our competitors and with the judges in New York were favorable," said Boyd, 30, a second-year law school student, from Eagle Mountain, Utah County.

Hendrickson, 25, a second-year law school student, from Palos Verdes, Calif., said the panel of judges liked BYU's style.

"A lot of the competition is trying to strike the balance among being articulate, being confident and at the same time showing respect to the judges," she said.

H. Reese Hansen, dean of the J. Reuben Clark Law School, said he was pleased with the team's accomplishments.

"To have our students compete and win a national moot court competition is a singular honor that reflects the quality of students we have here at the law school," he said.

Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia, Joseph McLaughlin of the Second Circuit Court and Ilana Diamond Rovner of the Seventh Circuit judged the final competition.

Each spring, the Irving R. Kaufman Memorial Securities Law Moot Court Competition is at Fordham Law School in New York City.

Genealogy research tools to become online resource

By ALI ANDERSON
anderson@du2.byu.edu
NewsNet Staff Writer

A new online genealogy service for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will soon make family history information more accessible, said LDS Church spokesman Dale Bills.

"We are committed to creating a service that will significantly enhance people's ability to do research in the privacy of their own homes," Bills said.

A formal announcement about the service will be made this spring or summer, Bills said.

Details about the content and function of the new genealogy service have not yet been released. The church is wary of providing information about the service before plans are definite, Bills said.

"We don't want to over-promise, given that it's all very new to us,"

Bills said.

Beta testing of the new service will be done this month or in April, Bills said. Needed adjustments will be made before the service is officially launched.

Several genealogy research companies displayed their products Thursday at the Computer Genealogy Conference in the Caroline Harman Continuing Education Building. Many of the companies are interested in linking their services with those of the church.

"We are separate from the church but would love to be affiliated," said John Tolman, dealer sales manager for Ancestry.com.

However, the church has not announced any plans to combine forces with other service providers.

"The church is open to making family history resources work well for as many people as possible. If that means cooperative work, we may look into it," Bills said.

Bills' funeral reflects hope and happiness

BY STEPHEN SMITH

Special to the Universe

Friends, relatives and ecclesiastical leaders spoke at the funeral of a BYU student Thursday, in Provo, including President Merrill J. Bateman.

Katie Bills, from Littleton, Colo., died Monday due to injuries she sustained in a skiing accident over the weekend.

"It was a beautiful ceremony," said Jolene Perrine, Bills' roommate and friend. Perrine was a speaker at the funeral. She based her talk on the resurrection and the love of Jesus Christ.

Perrine told the congregation, "Katie's spirit goes on and will someday be reunited with her body."

Bills' three sisters and three of her friends also spoke at the funeral.

President Bateman offered the concluding remarks.

President Bateman addressed the reasons for death and the end of mortality, after which he discussed the eventual immortality after resurrection.

President Bateman also talked about his own relationship with Bills, saying that he remembered feeling her wonderful spirit when he met her.

Bills' sisters related stories about Bills' life, some of which were humorous. They also talked about how Bills overcame many things throughout her life.

All speakers reflected on Bills' example and her kindness and how she affected others.

Services for Bills were conducted at the Oak Hills Stake Center Thursday morning. Bills was buried at Sandy's Larkin Sunset Garden Cemetery after the ceremony.

Miller, 21, a junior from Midland, Mich., majoring in international law and diplomacy.

Miller also said Liberty Square does charge extraneous fees, including various penalties for parking and other reasons.

"We got a $20 penalty because my roommate had a bike in our apartment. But it wasn't even a bike, it was just the wheel," he said.

Single students living on campus also pay an up-front fee when they apply for housing, but this $50 non-refundable fee is primarily used to cover application expenses, said Bart Stoddard, manager of the Housing Business Office.

"Application fees in general are used to go toward initial expenses of providing services for applying for housing," Stoddard said. "It covers things such as paper, stuffing envelopes, postings, office workers and providing physical facilities for that work."

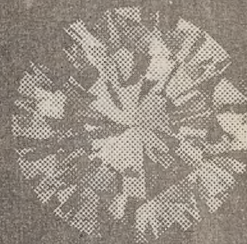

John Pace, manager of the Off-Campus Housing Office, said the decision to charge fees is left to the owners of apartment complexes.

"It's something they can do," he said. "Charging a fee could be legitimate."

Pace also said charging an application fee may help complexes keep tenants' charges down.

Mischief

An unidentified individual cut two sleeping student's ponytails between noon and 2:30 p.m. on the fifth floor of the Harold B. Lee Library. No suspects were identified.

Students were observed near a motorcycle parking sign at 5:12 p.m. in front of the Harold B. Lee Library. They said they were looking at a sign as a creative answer to a girl who had asked them to identify individuals on a date. They didn't think it was a good idea to take the sign if they were identified. The individuals were the Honor Code Office.

Driving

A police officer observed a man driving on Monday at 10:35 p.m. on 800 North. The officer issued a ticket for no proof of insurance and no proof of registration. The 44-year-old visitor said he was trying to turn right.

Arts Activity

An individual from Charleston, S.C., called the University Police on Monday at 12:42 p.m. to report that he had a chat room with a possible individual. Officers identified a suicidal individual on the phone. The individual said he was suicidal, but homeless. He was referred to transient services.

but asked to be taken to local restaurant. An officer complied with the request.

Trespass

Officers stopped four juveniles March 10 at 6:29 p.m. for roller blading on campus near the old Health Center south of campus. Because officers had previously warned the suspects, all were banned from campus for 72 hours.

Attempted Theft

A male individual was observed breaking into a vehicle at 12:43 a.m. March 10 in the Wyview Park parking lot. Officers apprehended the suspect and charged him with burglary of a vehicle, possession of marijuana, consumption of alcohol and use of burglary tools. The suspect was an 18-year-old male visitor to campus.

Theft

A pager was stolen from a student between noon on Jan. 15 and noon March 8. When the student realized the pager was missing on March 9 he called the pager number. A male individual called back and yelled obscen-ities at the victim but promised to return the pager. The pager still has not been returned to the student.

An unknown individual stole $160 in cash from an apartment in Penrose Hall between 10 a.m. and noon on Sunday. The victims were attending Stake Conference when the theft occurred and had left their doors unlocked. Other items of value in the room were not touched.

A leather jacket was stolen from the foreign language complex laundry room between 8 a.m. on March 2 and 8 a.m. on March 5. The jacket was valued at $180.

An unknown individual took $20 from a wallet in an apartment in Stover Hall on Wednesday between 11 a.m. and 5 p.m. The victim's roommate said they had left the door locked.

A slide projector and a video projector were stolen between 8 a.m. Feb. 26 and 8 a.m. March 1 from a closet in 103 JSB. The video projector was valued at $3,200 and the slide projector was worth $450.

By SUZANNE BONNER

NewsNet Staff Writer

Anyone who has seen Sarah Long's smile will say her specialty is in lighting up the lives of others. Despite the fact that Long is legally blind, her enthusiasm and determination is contagious enough to rub off on anyone who crosses her path.

Since birth, Long has been affected with congenital cataracts, a progressive eye disease. Long said the disease runs in her family.

"My mother has the same problem, and it was through her courage and guidance that I became strong," Long said.

Long said she believes that much of her inspiration came from the school she attended for six years. From seventh to 12th-grade, Long attended the West Virginia School for the Deaf and Blind.

"At school, I found a network of friends who could sympathize with me," Long said. "A lot of people there were older and had already experienced what I was going through."

After graduating from WYSB, Long decided to attend BYU. Now a junior, she is majoring in family science with a minor in geriatrics.

Although she is legally blind, Long has a little sight. Until she is familiar with an area, she will use her cane to help her find her way around.

"People treat me different when I have a cane," Long said. "They stare at me, thinking I'm blind, and I can see them."

Long finds these experiences humorous but wants to teach people that using a cane doesn't necessarily mean a person is completely blind.

Long feels that being a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints has helped her understand her blindness.

"I knew before I came to earth I would be blind," Long said. "So I can't sit here and ask 'why me?' because I knew before."

Most people are forced to see what they come into contact with, Long said, and this can be a disadvantage at times.

"I don't have to see the dirty language scrawled on the wall," Long said. "I can choose to see."

Long's friends say she is graced with many talents.

"She's a great listener and counselor," said Crystal Goodwin, Long's roommate.

Goodwin, 19, said Long is one of the most spiritual people she knows.

"She goes to the temple by herself at least once a week to do baptisms for the dead," said Goodwin, a freshman from Seattle who has not declared a major.

Some teachers who have had Long as a student said they believe she taught them more than they taught her. Kathleen Johnson, a secondary instructor at WYSB, has known Long for nearly nine years.

"Sarah is just like everyone else," Johnson said. "She's just in there pitchin' to make a life of herself — and she'll do it."

Shirley Klein, a professor of family science at BYU, said Long was very straightforward about what she needed to succeed in her class.

Klein explained that on the first day of class, Long approached her and asked that if Klein would be using transparencies for class discussion,

Long would need copies of them in size 36 font.

"Her blindness is only one of the many challenges she faces, and yet she goes forward with her life with both enthusiasm and grace," Klein said.

Stars to shine on new night

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Never on Sundays for the Oscars, the film industry said for 46 years.

The chance to shore up TV rating — and a growing appreciation of the Academy Awards as an unparalleled promotional tool for Hollywood — finally caused a reappraisal.

When host Whoopi Goldberg steps on stage at 8:30 p.m. EST Sunday, ABC and the Academy of Motion Pictures Arts and Sciences hope that the weekend broadcast will be the start of a new tradition.

"It's a great move," Gil Cates said, who is producing his ninth Oscar ceremony.

"Sunday is a festive day, a day of relaxation. It's a non-work day, and I think that comports well with what Oscar should be," he said. "The whole phenomenon of folks rushing home from work to watch the show is going to be avoided."

Although Oscar ratings rise and fall, the ceremony is television's second most-watched event after the Super Bowl. Commercial rates reportedly have reached $1 million for a 30-second spot.

The show is lacking a hit centerpiece like last year's "Titanic." Some of the nominees are in films largely unseen by moviegoers, such as best actor contenders Nick Nolte in "Affliction" or Edward Norton in "American History X."

Although no one is expecting the ceremony to match the 1998 numbers, the best in 15 years, ABC is counting on the move from the show's longtime Monday berth and a half-hour earlier starting time to avoid a big deflation.

"Sunday has the highest 'HUT' level of the week, more 'households using television' than any other night," noted Michael Davies, ABC executive vice president in charge of specials.

The earlier start ensures the ceremony will end at a reasonable hour, a ratings plus. Viewership tends to plummet when the Oscars stretch into the midnight hour on the East Coast.

The star quotient remains unchanged. Harrison Ford, Jack Nicholson, Denzel Washington, Kim Basinger, John Travolta, Annette Bening, Andy Garcia and Helen Hunt are among the presenters.

es out from Baba Yaga's stew in Tears of Joy's production "Baba Yaga." The story, which is similar to "Hansel and Gretel," is using Bunraku puppetry.

The Tears of Joy Theater Company will present "Baba Yaga" at BYU on Saturday afternoon.

Baba Yaga is a legendary old woman from Russian and Slavic stories and folklore. In Poland, the story of Baba Yaga is the American version of "Hansel and Gretel," said Janet Bradley, managing director and founder of Tears of Joy.

Written for children, the play uses puppetry based on Bunraku puppetry. Bunraku puppets are traditional Japanese puppets created in the 15th Century.

The puppets are 3 and 4 feet tall. The puppets' operators stand on stage with them, but dress in all black so as to not be obtrusive, Bradley said. At times, two performers operate one puppet.

In this adaptation of the story, Marusia and Hedgehog must win their freedom from Baba Yaga, who has captured them in a stew and plans to cook them.

But Marusia and Hedgehog convince her to bargain with them.

If the two can obtain the magical black sunflower, which will allow Baba Yaga to live forever, they will be released.

But the sunflower is guarded by a fearsome dragon, and Marusia and Hedgehog may be forced to battle for their freedom with the dragon, hoping to escape with the black sunflower.

Bradley said the most delightful part of the play is Baba Yaga's walking house, Izbushka.

This is the part all of the children remember, Bradley said.

The house, which stands 10 feet high, dances and walks on little chicken legs.

The puppets sing and dance as well. Bradley said music is an important part of the production.

The Tears of Joy Theater Company is recognized as an accomplished and outstanding puppet company.

The company performs Saturday at 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. in the Varsity Theatre in the Wilkinson Student Center. Tickets cost $5 for adults and $3 for children.

Vocal Point to perform two shows

By PETER THUNELL
thunell@du2.byu.edu
NewsNet Staff Writer

BYU's a cappella group Vocal Point will perform two shows at the de Jong Concert Hall in the Harris Fine Arts Center on Saturday.

The theme of the concert will be "Vocal Point TV," a spoof on the infomercials that appear on the television late at night. Along with this new theme will be new songs, skits and comedy. The group will also sing some of their past favorites. Last semester the theme was construction, playing off of campus and highway construction.

As to exactly which specific songs they will be singing, they're keeping it a surprise. But the audience can expect some fun as they poke fun at TV, said Jim Anglesey, the group's faculty director.

"This concert is what we work towards all year. It's the big finale," Anglesey said.

Vocal Point has been keeping a busy schedule lately. After singing at the governor's mansion for the state Legislature in January, Gov. Leavitt invited the group to come back and entertain the crowd at the Governor's Ball on April 24.

Sam Blackham, 22, a sophomore from Orem, majoring in accounting, enjoys being in Vocal Point because of all of the performing they do.

"We practice every day for two hours in the morning, and then we practice extra hours before a concert. It's a big time commitment, but we get to perform more than any other group on campus," Blackham said.

There will be a 2 p.m. matinee and a 7:30 p.m. show, both at the de Jong

Concert Hall. Tickets are $8 for the general public and $5 for students and faculty. Auditions for 1999-2000 Vocal Point will be on April 6 and 7. More information is available on the audition sheet outside of Jim Anglesey's office at E-538 HFAC.

ZCMI to contribute to diabetes research

By AMBER FURST
amber@du2.byu.edu
NewsNet Staff Writer

The Juvenile Diabetes Foundation and ZCMI will host a luncheon, fashion show and auction today to earn money for diabetes research.

The events will be at the Little America Hotel in Salt Lake City, and all proceeds will go to the JDF.

The JDF is the world's leading non-profit organization of diabetes research and was founded in 1970 by parents of children with diabetes.

Diane Savage, the money raising manager for JDF, said this is the first year the foundation has done a fashion show to earn money.

"ZCMI does a fabulous fashion show, and their fashion department is very sophisticated. This is really a great cause, and I think it will be a fun afternoon," she said.

Savage, whose father has diabetes, has been involved with the JDF for three years.

"There has been a lot of response for the show. Everything's volunteer based, and I think this is going to be a great success," she said.

Mary Kaye Huntsman, one of the chairs for the JDF, said a lot of people do not realize that insulin is not a cure for diabetes, and the disease kills one American every three minutes.

"Our first goal is awareness, and hopefully this fashion show will educate people and introduce them to how diabetes affects people physically, mentally and emotionally," she said.

Huntsman has been involved with JDF since her child was diagnosed with diabetes two years ago.

The fashion show will feature spring fashions from ZCMI modeled by children who have diabetes, their families and ZCMI models.

Fashion coordinator for ZCMI, Sondra Ence-Paul, said the fashion show will feature dressy, high-end fashions the department will have this spring.

Ence-Paul said ZCMI does a lot to help support the community, and the JDF is another cause ZCMI feels is a worth supporting.

"These shows cost up to $10,000 to put on, and ZCMI does everything for free. We see this program as a way to give back to the community," she said.

ZCMI has also put on fashion shows as money raisers for the Utah Youth Village, Arthritis Foundation and Salt Lake Medical Auxiliary.

There will also be two actions at the luncheon. The first will be a silent auction with donated items, such as dinners at restaurants and art.

The second is a "Fund-A-Grant Auction," where donors can contribute financially to diabetes research.

Tickets are $25 and can be purchased by calling the JDF at (801) 530-0660. The show starts at 11 a.m. at the Little America Hotel, 500 South Main.

Auto smarts make car care easier

By KRISTIN TENNEY
kristin@du2.byu.edu
NewsNet Staff Writer

Whether you drive a new Lexus or a used Chevy, you need to care for your car. Students usually don't have a regular mechanic and need to know the basics of do-it-yourself car care.

"It's funny how a lot of people believe that if it's not broken don't fix it, but if they could just take a few minutes to educate themselves they could save themselves a lot of hassle and money," said Brady Kimball, owner of Dealers Wholesale Repair in Orem.

One reason people shy away from do-it-yourself car care is that they are intimidated by car lingo, said Alpine Home Car Mechanic David Healey.

"If people knew the way a car runs and the terminology of automotive mechanics they would probably feel more comfortable about doing it themselves," he said.

Some simple terms like carburetor, cam shaft, valve, cylinder, intake stroke, compression stroke and power stroke need to be understood in order to understand how a car works.

It all starts in the cylinder, Healey said. Small cars have fewer cylinders because they do not need the power that larger vehicles need. Smaller cars also use less gas and are more economical than those with more cylinders.

Pistons are located inside the cylinders and they move up and down to create power. The piston moving down is called the intake stroke. As it moves down an intake valve opens and allows a fuel mixture from the carburetor or injector to enter the cylinder.

After the piston reaches the bottom it starts back up and the intake valve closes to squeeze the fuel mixture tightly into the cylinder.

This process is called the compression stroke because the piston is compressing the fuel mixture into a tighter space.

Just as the piston reaches the top of the cylinder, the spark plug fires a spark into the fuel mixture, which explodes, forcing the piston to be slammed down from the explosion. This process is called the power stroke.

Each cylinder repeats the process in synchronization with help from the cam shaft. The cam shaft is a long steel rod with different sized bumps that open and close the valves in coordination. This entire process is what powers a car.

Oil changes are the most inexpensive, but most neglected preventative maintenance procedure.

If oil changes are done on a regular basis the car will run longer and avoid many future problems, Kimball said.

Checking the oil is easy. The dip stick, located in different places on different cars, is used to measure the oil in the oil pan. The dip stick should be checked daily if the car is driven long distances every day, but must be checked at least 3 times a month, Healey said.

Oil should be added as needed to keep the crank shaft lubricated. The crank shaft is attached to the pistons and if there is not enough oil it will get hot and could ruin the engine.

All car manufacturers have required service intervals set for oil changes.

The suggested time for oil changes should be listed in the car's owners' manual, Kimball said.

The general rule is to change the oil every 3,000 miles.

To change the oil, the plug from the bottom of the oil pan needs to be removed to allow the old oil to drain out.

After replacing the plug new oil can be added by pouring oil into the hole under the oil cap.

Healey warns that adding too much oil can damage the engine.

"When a person is adding oil they should add about a half a quart at a time to insure they do not over fill the pan. Overfilling can cause leaks and engine damage," he said.

One car care tip from Jiffy Lube is that car owners check coolant levels when checking oil levels.

Coolant is a liquid sometimes called antifreeze that is poured into the radiator and pumped through portals around the entire engine to cool it. As the coolant flows around the piston area it picks up the heat of friction before flowing through the radiator, where the fan pushes cool air over the coolant and allows it lose that heat before the process begins again.

Wear and tear makes old tires tired

By KAREN ROCHESTER
karen@du2.byu.edu
NewsNet Staff Writer

The wheels on your car go round and round, and as they do they wear down.

The transition of winter and summer months mean tires need to be exchanged — or do they?

Dennis Squire, salesman at Big O Tires in Provo, said the use of snow tires is dependant upon the individual drivers and the car they drive. But the best thing to do is use snow tires.

Snow tires provide better traction in the snow than summer tires and studs are the best tires for snow, Squire said.

Studs provide 236 percent better traction than summer tires and are 226 percent better than snow tires, he said.

Winter tires have a deeper tread which causes less rubber to touch the road, Squire said. The deeper tread allows the slush to channel out from under the tires in winter months.

"Winter studded tires don't wear as well as summer tires," Squire said.

Squire said studded tires are better for stopping on ice than starting on the ice or on a hill.

Summer tires do not have the same amount of tread, which causes the tires to wear longer, Squire said.

Brain Hansen, store manager of Maxi Auto Center in Provo said there is no set time as to when snow tires must go on or come off, but the season is usually considered to be between October 15 and April 15.

"Snow tires are the safest method for traffic other than chains for icy road conditions," Hansen said. But with the increased use of all-season tires, snow tires are not the big sellers they once were.

"I stress good judgment in icy conditions," Hansen said.

The best way to drive on icy roads is avoid both excessive speed and breaking hard, he said.

"Front wheel drive vehicles are better than back wheel drive for driving in icy conditions," Squire said.

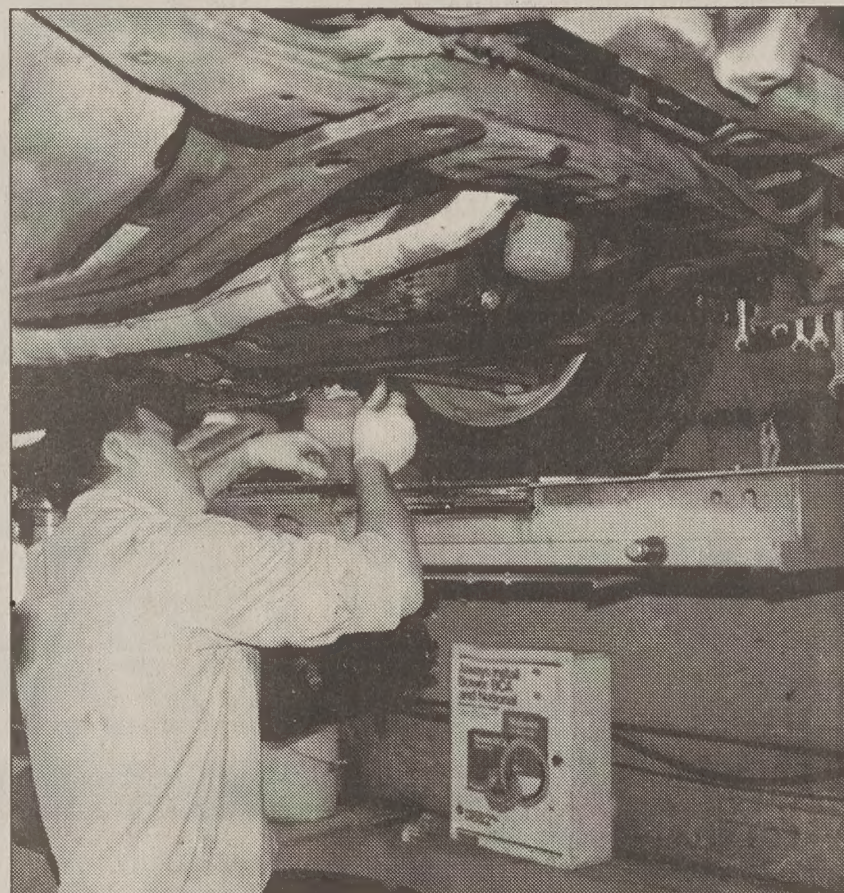

Richard Chan, assistant manager of Discount Tires in Orem, said the indicator on tires to tell when the tires are worn is a square bar located across the tire, and when it blends in with the tire tread, the tire is worn.

Chan suggests three ways to keep tires from wearing as fast: rotate tires regularly, control the air pressure and sipping.

"It is suggested to rotate tires every 4,000 to 5,000 miles," he said.

Sipping a tire is when the tire is cut and cool air is let in the tire to make for less friction, Chan said. This sipping process also provides a softer ride, he said.

The life of the tire is dependant on the type of tire bought, Chan said

New, used cars compete in student buying decision

By MARC STRYKER

The hour has come. Your '79 Chevrolet Malibu Classic has backfired for the last time and you're looking for a new set of wheels. You have two general choices in purchasing your next car: new or used?

Like most Americans, chances are you'll start hunting for a used car. According to the National Automobile Dealers Association, used car sales have surpassed sales for new cars since 1989. Today, manufacturers are making better vehicles that run beyond what 20 years ago was the 100,000 mile death mark.

Many people are shying away from new car lots, determining used car purchases to be smarter investments. New car buyers typically take a $5000 depreciation hit the moment they drive the car off the lot.

"Why pay $20,000 for a new car when you can buy a used car for half that?" said Tom Johnson, 23, a senior from Clearwater Beach, Fla., majoring in English. Johnson also said that used car buyers can resell at a better price than buyers selling a new car.

Since a car purchase is a substantial investment, it's wise to take precautions before handing over money.

For instance, it is critical to know the vehicle's history. Vehicles are often sold with the buyer never knowing the car's maintenance record. Using the car's Vehicle Identification Number, which is located on the driver side of the dashboard, you can identify hidden maintenance problems or determine a clean bill of health.

Carfax, a vehicle history service, has a Web site (www.carfax.com) where would-be buyers can enter the VIN and get an initial report on all cars built since 1981. Consumer Reports (www.consumerreports.com) also has a service where a potential buyer can receive a reliability history and trouble summary for most models.

According to auto dealers throughout Utah County, students looking for an economical deal frequently buy the Toyota Camry or Corolla. The low price and reliability make the perfect match for students with tight budgets. For $2,000 less than the Corolla, Chevrolet makes the Prism, which is the near equivalent of the Toyota model.

If you're buying from an individual, ask to see service records. Although a car model may have a good reputation, its future performance will depend on the previous owner's treatment.

"A lemon is a lemon, no matter what the brand," Johnson said.

Surprises hide under hood

Buying a car may be time consuming, but the hours spent will be worth it if you shop well and do the homework, said Richard Hundley of Hundley Dick Garage in Orem.

If not, hefty prices may come later. Lori Allred, a junior from Salt Lake City majoring in history, said she bought a car from her stepmother without even test driving it.

"I had seen it driven and knew it ran well," she said. But shortly after the purchase, the car began to have problems.

The alternator went out and the radiator hoses needed to be replaced, among other things. Allred said she spent almost $2,500 in repairs. The repair bill matched the original purchase price.

Jeff Pallock, a resident from Pleasant Grove and a mechanic at All-Tec Auto Repair, said mechanics can perform a used car check to ensure the vehicle will run well. Included in this check is an inspection for past wrecks and leaks in the engine. He said it is a small price to pay to get a reliable car.

Hundley said he also strongly suggests to get a state inspection and an emissions report. Most problems will show up there. The cost is about $25 and is well worth it, he said.

Pallock warned against salvaged cars. He said when looking at a car, one should always ask if the car has a clean title. If it has a salvaged title, he said that cuts the price in half. In some states like California, it's against the law to sell salvaged cars at dealerships because of poor quality, he said.

Hundley said there are many consumer protection laws to protect buyers when purchasing a car from a dealership. If the car from a dealership has problems, the consumer has resources. If the dealer won't help, the buyer may go to the Department on Motor Vehicles. But most dealerships will represent the car accurately and treat the customer well.

Hundley said with a private sale, there are no guarantees.

Consumer Reports' Web site (www.consumerreports.com) offers information on how to shop for a car.

Y auto classes running out

NewsNet Services

This will be the last semester that automotive classes will be offered at BYU.

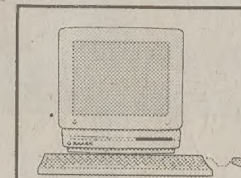

Dr. Ronald F. Gonzalez, chair of the Technology Teacher Education program, said the automotive series of the TTE program is being closed primarily because there are too few people majoring in the program.

"BYU has a tendency to fund programs according to the number of majors," he said.

According to Gonzalez, about 60 TTE majors are currently enrolled in the program, which only three have an emphasis in auto mechanics. BYU's TTE automotive program prepares students to teach auto mechanics at the secondary and elementary levels.

Gonzalez said students majoring in automotive will have to go to other universities for the area.

Car coverage basics ensure peace of mind

STEPHANIE CARN
stephanie@du2.byu.edu
NewsNet Staff Writer

Buying car insurance for the first time may find it hard to know what they are getting into. Insurance agents say students are always informed.

Young, a Farmers Insurance agent, said, "I think if you add up all the premiums that you pay for a lifetime, you end up paying more than you would on a policy you're going to be spending money for something, but for you to know how it works," he said.

With an understanding of the basics, students can save money and purchase the right kind of insurance they need.

•Premiums: Young said a premium is the period payment made to keep the policy in force.

Premiums can be priced for either six months or a year. A certain amount of money must be paid to keep the policy in force for that length of time.

Many agencies have different payment plans at various dollar amounts that put the policy in force.

•Deductibles: There are usually two coverages in an insurance policy that have deductibles: comprehensive and collision.

David Neugart, an All State Insurance agent, said a deductible is "the dollar amount you pay after which the insurance will pay 100 percent of the rest of the amount needed to repair or replace want for these coverages. Young advised students to pick a deductible amount they feel comfortable with.

•Liability Coverage: The Web site www.insure.com says, "Liability coverage is the foundation of any auto insurance policy, and is required in most states." It covers the driver for any damage that he or she might be held responsible for in an accident.

Liability coverage is usually found in the form 25/50/15, which means the policy holder is covered for up to $25,000 per person for bodily injury, no more than $50,000 per accident for total bodily injury loss and $15,000 property damage. This money is paid to the other party of the accident if the policy holder is liable.

•Comprehensive Coverage: This covers your car for fire, theft, glass breakage, vandalism, natural disasters or collisions with animals.

"Basically it covers loss to your car for anything that happens, to it other than an actual collision," Young said.

Choosing a deductible for this coverage depends on how often your windshield is damaged or broken.

•Collision Coverage: This covers loss to any covered car when involved in a collision with another object besides an animal.

Another coverage available is emergency road service, which may cover towing to the nearest repair shop, mechanical labor up to one hour and gas, oil, battery or tire delivery.

Workers penalized with boots, tows

ALLISON BRINKERHOFF
allison@du2.byu.edu
NewsNet Staff Writer

Booting and booting is a prevalent practice in the Provo area around BYU campus. But according to Berkey, Provo City parking enforcement booting is an effective parking solution.

To get people's attention. By towing cars out of the way to pay their outstanding tickets," he said.

Booting near campus is the result of parking in red zones, blocking intersections, overloading or having expired plates.

These circumstances cause impoundment, and a car will be given and a car will be towed, Colton said.

The fine for towing is $80 per hour, with a boot fee of $8 - $10.

Boots from campus, vehicles are towed for 72 hours. The most common towing occurs when a car is left on the street for 72 hours, after which a red sticker is placed on the vehicle.

If a car is not moved within 72 hours of placement, the car will be towed, Berkey said.

Boots also towed when they have four or more outstanding tickets issued.

The hours of towing in each complex vary. "Some complexes tow around the clock while others enforce parking only during the evening hours. The earliest evening enforcement begins at 6 p.m. and the latest begins at midnight," Colton said.

Most apartment tows occur when vehicles do not have parking passes for the complexes in which they are parked, Colton said.

"Other tows occur when cars are double parked or parked in red zones. Vehicles breaking these laws can be towed from any apartment complex at any time," Colton said.

If a tow truck is not available, a boot may be placed on one of the tires to ensure that the owner does not get off without paying a fine, Colton said.

Fines for removing a boot are $40. However, towing prices range from $50 - $80, depending on the complex, Colton said.

Towing and booting fines on campus are generally lower.

"While BYU does tow cars that violate parking laws, they tend to use boots more often," said Lt. Aaron Rhoades, manager of BYU Parking and Security Services.

Booting and towing on campus occurs when a vehicle has received seven or more citations in a calendar year, an unregistered vehicle has two or more outstanding tickets, a vehicle is blocking an intersection or fire lanes, and, of course, if a vehicle is parked in a tow zone, Rhoades said.

Generally, towing on campus costs $25 unless an amount is posted that states otherwise. Boots are $20 to remove.

So, even if the parking looks like it might be free, be sure to look for the signs or the parking could cost a pretty penny.

Lots shelter students from tickets, violations

NewsNet Services

Although many students complain about on-campus parking, BYU parking officials say it is easier to walk a few more minutes or get a permit and not to take the chance of getting a ticket.

According to Lt. Aaron Rhoades of the BYU Parking and Security Services Division, too many students get their privileges revoked.

"I see way too many students every day," Rhoades said. "We probably give 50 to 100 tickets a day."

He said A lots are for faculty and staff only and the permits are part of faculty benefits.

G lots are available to graduate students. Rhoades said students apply through their college for a permit. G permits cost $40 a year and extra permits are available to undergraduates.

The Y/R lots are available to undergraduate students. These permits cost $15 for the year, but they are pro-rated after January for $10.

C permits are available to students who live on campus. The permits cost $8 a year or $5 after January.

Rhoades said there are unrestricted lots by the football stadium where people with any permit can park.

"There are always Y permits available, but people want to park closer to campus," Rhoades said. "It would be nice to have more parking, and we're always looking for improvement."

Emissions code comes clean

NewsNet Services

Car owners who live in Provo for more than 60 days must comply with emissions standards.

Provo City adopted a code of emissions standards for cars.

Residents of more than 60 days in Provo must have their car tested for emissions.

Provo City said Provo City Health Department received credit from the Environmental Protection Agency for each vehicle tested, but the EPA does not give credit for testing vehicles made before 1968, Beebe said.

Utah County is also implementing a high-tech system to detect problematic vehicles.

How to defend your fender

NewsNet Services

Emotions are high and the panic when they are involved in an accident, it is important to do before an accident.

Young, traffic supervisor of the traffic department, said no minor accident, police participants sort out the accident.

Utah law requires an accident report if there is at least $1,000 in damage is hard to get.

Young suggests to count damages for each part of the vehicle affected.

He said parking lot fender benders are no exception.

"Even if you hit a car in a parking lot ... you must leave a note with all vital information for the owner of the car to get a hold of you," Young said.

Most fender benders don't end up in court. If a driver in an accident remembers a few basic tips, problems with insurance companies and other drivers can be avoided.

Suggestions include calling an ambulance for anyone seriously injured and securing names and addresses of people in the other car and of witnesses.

Recruits choose BYU for coaches

By TRISHA BARKER
trisha@du2.byu.edu
NewsNet Sports Writer

Editor's note: This is the second part of a two-part series on football recruiting at BYU.

It's not as fun as it looks on TV. Most television shows glamorize the recruiting process. They paint pictures of driving fast cars, getting paid lots of money and instantly gaining new friends.

Former BYU recruits said although the process is exciting, being a potential student-athlete can get old quickly, especially after enduring months of phone calls, letters and visits.

Freshman Junior Mahe, a graduate from Brighton High School in Sandy, was recruited last year by seven major schools in the mid-West. He was first contacted by BYU at a football camp the summer before his senior year.

"Coach Norm Chow came up to me during football camp and said they had a scholarship for me," Mahe said. "That was the initial contact I got from BYU."

After the start of his senior year, Mahe said he received a letter and a call from either Chow or head coach LaVell Edwards once a week. In January, he visited the campus with two other potential recruits and was taken to Sundance Ski Resort for dinner and snowmobiling.

"The visits are all the same," Mahe said. "They give you free meals, make you have a fun time and treat you like kings for a weekend. The main difference is in how the actual schools run and what type of atmosphere there is."

Mahe said he was impressed with the integrity of the program and the coaches at BYU.

"Other schools would say that if I went there I would start, which is a bunch of bull," he said. "That didn't seem right. BYU told me that I could play, but that I had to prove myself first. I would have to earn my way in, just like everyone else. That really got to me."

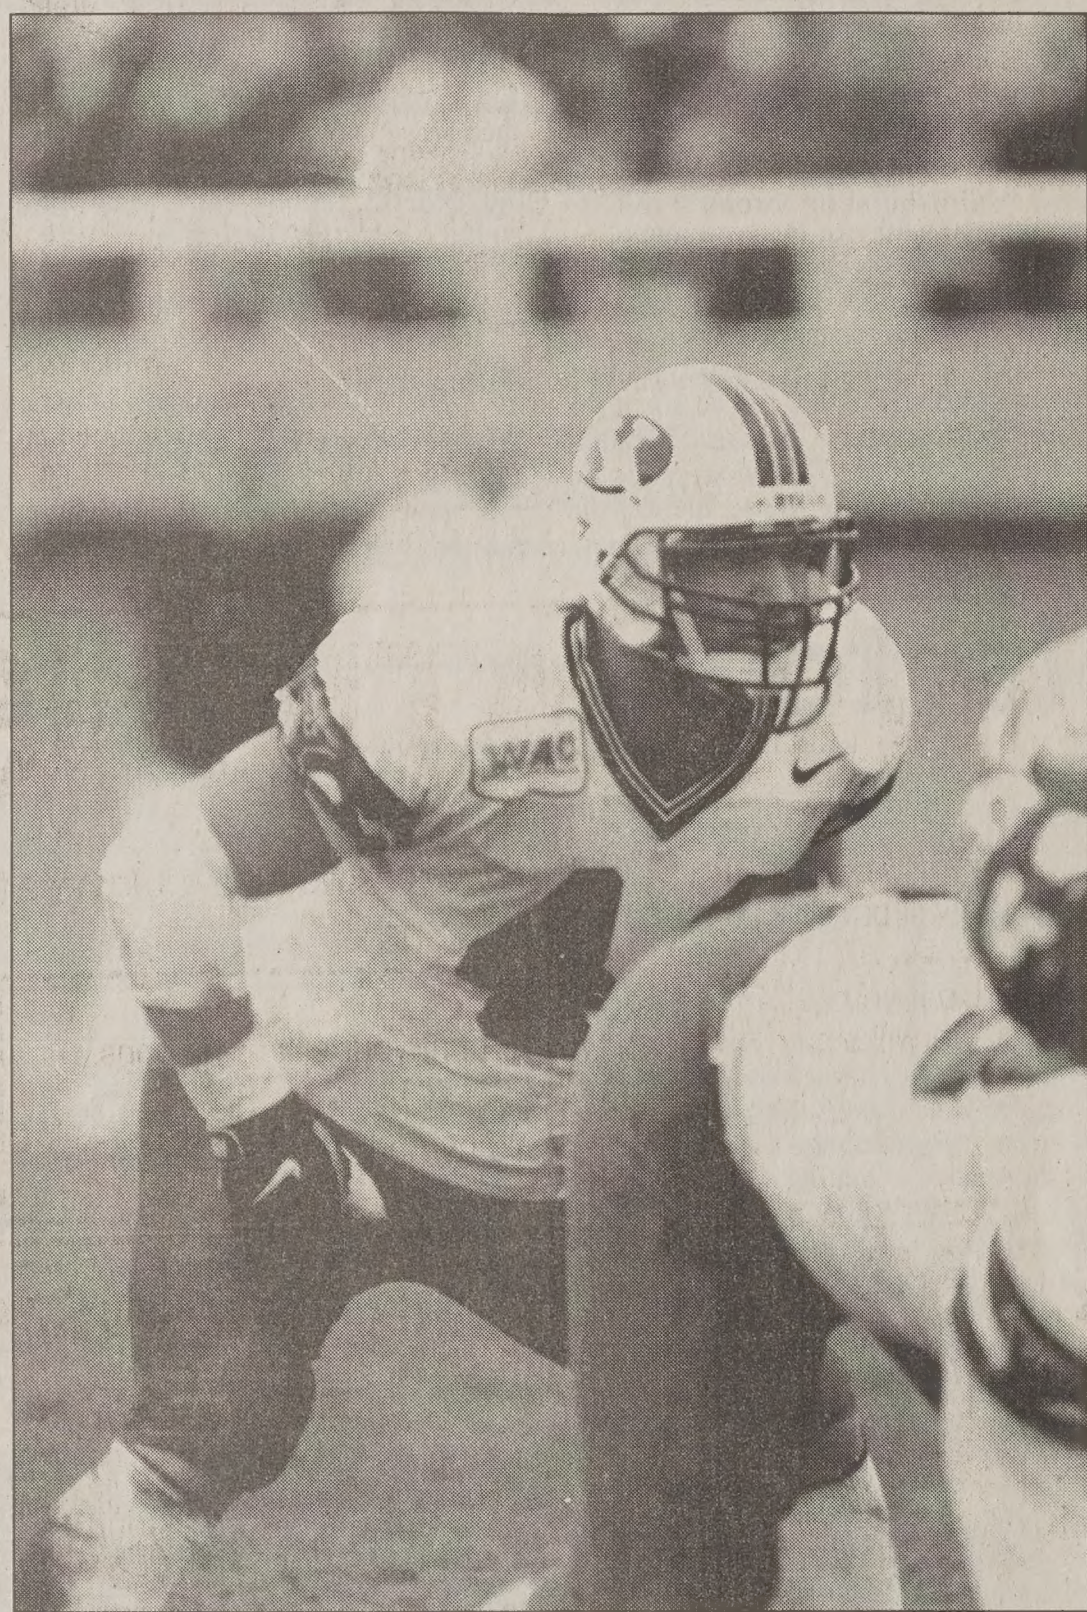

Mahe signed a letter of intent with BYU on National Signing Day, Feb. 4, 1998. He said playing for this university has provided him with everything he expected and more.

"I have been blessed. I have been fortunate. It's been everything I expected and more," Mahe said. "I have had more than my share. Even though the recruiting process was pretty crazy, I enjoyed it. I judged the coaches by the way they recruited."

Freshman Hanale Vincent, a red-shirt offensive lineman from Kailua, Hawaii, said he was equally impressed with the integrity of the coaches that recruited him. He, too, was approached at a BYU football camp and then became part of the weekly mailings and phone calls.

"They only called me once a week," Vincent said. "It was good because other schools would call every day. BYU told us what they thought about us, and then they left it for us to decide."

Although he was offered significant scholarships from bigger universities, Vincent said BYU best suited his needs, largely because of its Honor Code and its positive atmosphere.

"I had always wanted to come here," Vincent said. "When I came on the trip, coach Edwards talked to me and told me he had a scholarship for me. Then I met some of the guys, and they were all cool. There were no superstars. They're all just friendly guys."

Freshman Curtis Holder, a red-shirt wide receiver from Rancho Santa Fe, Calif., said the recruiting process taught him about an aspect of football he had never seen before.

"Before it was just play and win," Holder said. "Then it was about dishonesty and lying. BYU didn't lie at all, but other schools would work their way around your questions and make up stories. That really frustrated me." Holder said the dishonesty bothered him more than anything else.

"As a young recruit, you're vulnerable," he said. "College football is big and anything the coaches say, you want to eat up. A lot of people really end up getting messed up."

Most players tend to see the high level of integrity as something that would be expected from a university owned by The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. It is important to realize, however, that the integrity of the university is examined just as heavily by those that are not members of the church.

Kevin Gilbride is a quarterback from Jacksonville, Fla., who red-shirted last season. He lettered three times in varsity football at Bishop Kenney High School and was recruited by 10 well-known universities such as Michigan State, Kansas State, Alabama-Birmingham and Texas-Tech University.

Unlike many players, Gilbride hasn't always had dreams of playing for the Cougars. He is not a member of the LDS Church and said his exposure to BYU has mostly come from the well-known, long-standing quarterback tradition.

Gilbride said his father, a former coach for the San Diego Chargers, was excited for him to become a part of that tradition. He said he was also pleased for him to work with BYU's well-respected coaching staff.

"I came here because I liked the people," Gilbride said. "The guys on the team were good guys."

"It was a combination of things; I liked the coaches, I felt like I would fit in ... I enjoy it here. I'm very happy that I made that decision."

Gymnasts set for last home meet

By ABE MILLS
abe@du2.byu.edu
NewsNet Sports Writer

BYU seniors Ernie Higbee, Dmitry Kolodazhnyy, Brandon Fitt and Rob Rimpini will compete in their last collegiate home meet when the Cougars host Cal-Berkeley tonight in the Smith Fieldhouse.

Before the meet, head coach Mako Sakamoto will present the four seniors with gifts he picked out for each of them. They will also be presented with a team blanket.

"It's a special day for the seniors," Sakamoto said. "They've worked so hard for four years and they've been loyal. They've had ups and downs, good times and bad times. It's their last chance to compete in front of their home crowd. It's a big deal."

Although a senior, Kolodazhnyy has only been at BYU this year. He graduated from a school in Ukraine and had just one year of eligibility left to compete. "Deema," as his teammates call him, competed on the Ukrainian National Team before coming to BYU.

"(BYU) is really good for me. It's a huge experience," Kolodazhnyy said. "I like this place, the team and the crowd."

Kolodazhnyy said he is not used to competing in front of so many people, but that he is getting used to it. He will only compete on the pommel horse tonight because of a sprained ankle but expects to be back for his other events in the regional competition.

Higbee will be competing on the pommel horse tonight for the first time this year. He said Sakamoto is giving him a chance as a senior to nail his routine.

"If I do well in it, I'll probably keep doing it for the rest of the season. If I don't do well, then at least I had the opportunity," he said.

Higbee said one of the best things he's learned from his experience at BYU is the spirit of team competition.

"Gymnastics on the international level is more of an individual sport. Here I've learned that we compete as a team. Everybody is cheering for everybody else to stick their routines," he said.

Tonight's meet gets underway at 7.

Arun Gandhi

The 21st Century Is Coming, But Where Are We Going?

Never in human history has there been so much hate, prejudice, and violence as in the 20th century. In this century alone, more than 76 million people have been killed in wars and violence; that is seven times more than that of the last century and eleven times more than that of the 18th century.

We are now on the threshold of the 21st century. Do we continue to live with the legacy of violence and destroy our humanity, or do we seek alternatives that could help us reduce violence in our societies? We cannot eliminate violence altogether, but we can certainly learn to be more understanding of each other, more accepting of the differences that exist, and more appreciative of the humanity in us.

Mr. Gandhi brings to this subject a practical approach. He illustrates his arguments with significant examples of how people have effectively used nonviolence in recent times to overthrow dictatorships and resolve conflicts.

Born in 1934 in Durban, South Africa, Mr. Gandhi was profoundly impacted by the experiences of growing up under the repressive regime of an apartheid government. Struggling with the rage he felt about the racial attacks he endured in South Africa, Arun was sent at the age of 12 to live with his grandfather Mohandas Karamchand, or Mahatma Gandhi, India's legendary spiritual and social leader. His grandfather spent an hour alone with Arun each day, telling him stories and answering his questions. As a result, Arun has dedicated his life to sharing the wisdom of his grandfather and fostering nonviolent solutions to social problems.

Arun is a journalist, a scholar, and an accomplished author. Currently residing in Memphis, but frequently shuttling all over the globe, Arun conducts his work from the M. K. Gandhi Institute for Nonviolence, which he and his wife, Sunanda, founded in 1991.

Mr. Gandhi is also speaking at the Second Annual MicroEnterprise Conference: Investing in the Poor, March 26, at 9:50 a.m. in room 3220 WSC. All are invited to attend.

A question-and-answer session will be held at 12 noon in the Marriott Center Cougar Room.

Baseball to make home debut today vs. Spartans

NewsNet Services

For a month and a half, BYU baseball has played the part of a collegiate orphan.

The Cougars have already played a large chunk of their schedule — 23 games — and still have yet to make an appearance in Provo. But that will all change this weekend when BYU returns to the friendly confines of Cougar Field today and Saturday in a three-game series with San Jose State.

"We have seen a lot of growth in our team on the road, but we are more in our element at home," BYU coach Gary Pullins said. "This will be a terrific way for us to open the home season."

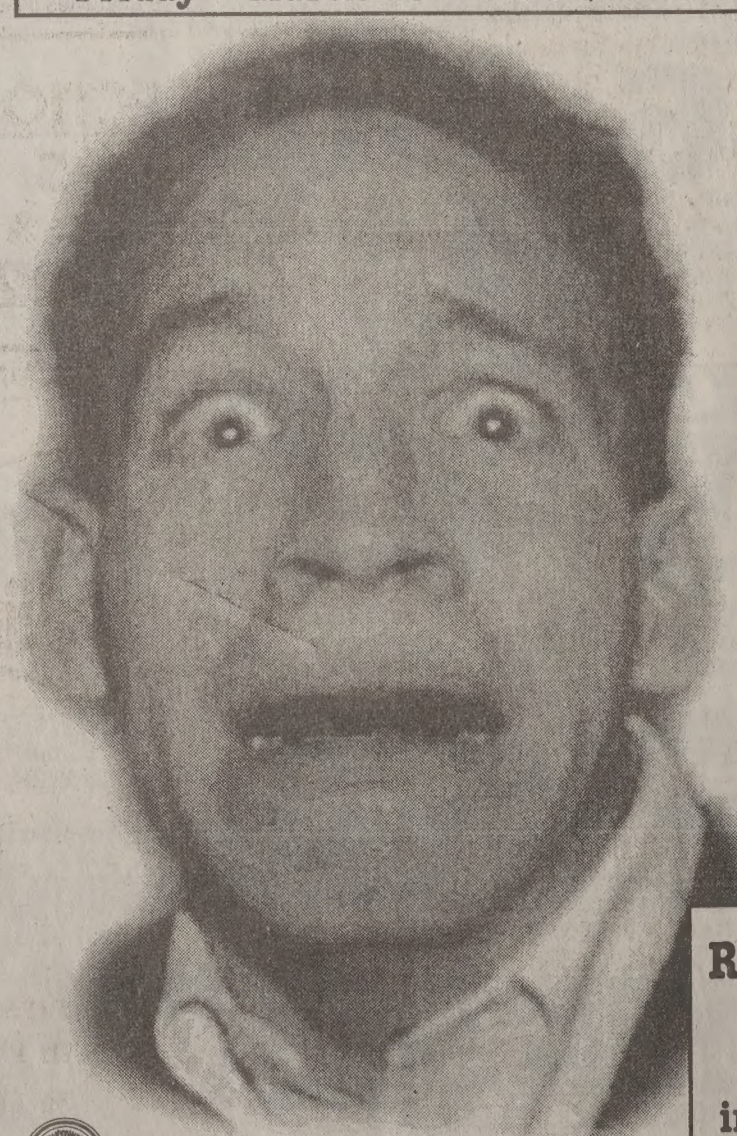

BYU (10-13, 5-4) will need all the perks of a home-field advantage this weekend. The Spartans (15-10-1) sit atop the WAC rankings with a 6-0 conference record.

Today's contest, which begins at 2 p.m., will be the first of 20 home games for BYU. Saturday's doubleheader begins at noon.

Women begin outdoor season

By TRISHA BARKER

The BYU women's track and field team will open its outdoor season Saturday at the Cal-Poly Invitational in San Luis Obispo, Calif.

Head track and field coach Craig Poole said the athletes will use the meet to gain experience in the outdoor environment.

"Since it's the first meet, we're not sure how people will be doing," Poole said. "We want to try the girls in different events to strengthen their versatility and in turn, strengthen their main event."

The invitational will include teams from Utah State, Cal-Poly and the University of Southern California. Although the meet will be team-scored, Poole said he is not concerned with its outcome.

"We're not trying to overwork anyone," he said. "We want the girls to establish themselves and see what running outdoor is like."

Eleven of the team's athletes are still winding down from the indoor season. Less than two weeks ago, the women placed sixth at the NCAA National Track Championships in Indianapolis, Ind.

Poole said the short break was a welcome relief for the team and should help strengthen the runners later in the season.

Senior All-American runner Julie Bennion said she is excited to get outdoors. Like many of the Cougar athletes, she said she uses the indoor season as preparation for outdoor competition.

Y diver places 15th at NCAAs

BYU junior Rachelle Smith posted a 15th-place finish in the first day of the 1999 NCAA Women's Swimming and Diving Championships on Thursday.

Smith, a diver from West Valley City, became BYU's sole qualifier for the meet with her performance in last weekend's NCAA Zone E Diving Championships in Tempe, Ariz.

A 1-meter board specialist, Smith placed 15th in the event to receive Honorable Mention All-American status. She will compete today in her second qualifying event, the 3-meter board at the University of Georgia in Athens, Ga.

"She's a little disappointed that she didn't make the finals, and may not recognize right now what a wonderful thing it is (to compete)," BYU diving coach Keith Russell said. "She could have made the finals but had some fantastic dives and was right there near the top."

Smith competed against divers from 17 other schools in the zone meet last weekend to chalk up a 422.50 on the 1-meter board and land a second-place finish just ahead of UCLA's Amee Baghrarian. She also notched a fifth-place finish on the 3-meter board to qualify for this weekend's competition in both events.

Smith posted her third consecutive second-place finish on the 1-meter in this year's WAC Championships.

Smith will look to build on her strong first day showing with today's competition on the 3-meter board to end her season.

Roberts said. "I want some action." That seems to be the sentiment around the team this week, as several athletes have had nearly three weeks without serious competition. With the end of the indoor season the Cougars are ready to get outside and defend their 1998 WAC outdoor title.

The Cougars return several key members from last year's championship squad, and will be favored to win again, Hirschi said.

Leading the way will be Roberts and Myles-Mills. The duo were the only team members to travel to the NCAA indoor championships two weeks ago, and both performed well. Overall, the Cougars need to get healthy if they want to repeat as WAC champions, Hirschi said. With the injuries depleting his forces, Hirschi will be relying on several other athletes to step up for the Cougars.

One of those will be senior Clayton Patch, who won the WAC title last year in the 400 meters. He will be one of the favorites in the WAC again this year, as should high jumper Marc Chenn, who struggled through injury during the indoor season.

Chenn was valuable to the team last year, as he placed second in the high jump at the WAC outdoor finals.

State's Matt Christensen and Weber State's Blair Spencer.

On the women's side, the Cougars enter the tournament out of their comfort zone. BYU will be playing without No. 1 seed Darla Wenger and No. 3 Jennifer Birkwall. The Cougars will have to be flexible as they get used to playing with doubles partners they haven't played with all year.

"We had an upheaval in the women's team that forced us to reorganize all of our doubles teams," Fisher said. "But we've been working on our doubles play really hard for the past few weeks."

The new Family Guest House across the street from Utah Valley
Medical Center in Provo, gives the patients' families a place to stay.

Hospital home helps ease pain, stress

By STACEY
CHARLESWORTH
stacey@du2.byu.edu
NewsNet Staff Writer

Relatives of patients receiving medical care at Utah Valley Regional Medical Center now have an affordable home away from home right across the street.

The $1.35 million Family Guest House was designed for families who have to travel long distances to be with a family member in the hospital.

It will primarily serve families with babies in the newborn intensive care unit, patients in the adult ICU and patients receiving chemotherapy treatments.

Ronald Stoddard, medical director of the Neonatal Intensive Care Unit, said there are few things in life as stressful as having a premature baby born into your life.

Kalleen Lund, of Provo, said she knows from experience how stressful it can be to find a place to stay when you are far from home and have a loved one in the hospital.

Her 9-year-old son was diagnosed with cancer and was hospitalized for 12 weeks in the ICU of Primary Children's Hospital.

Lund said she and her husband put many miles on their car traveling back and forth from Provo to Salt Lake City to see their son.

They stayed in the Ronald McDonald House in Salt Lake, a home similar to the Family Guest House.

Lund said from personal experience she knew how important it was to be near the hospital.

She said she wanted the new home to be close to the hospital so that families could respond immediately to an emergency call.

"It's marvelous, right across the street from the hospital" she said.

Ron Jones, regional operations officer for UVRMC, Orem Community Hospital and American Fork Hospital, said, "Without a doubt family is so important to the healing process."

"When we started this project, we hoped we would have enough money to build something like a Motel 6. But this is a Holiday Inn Plus," he said.

This is not the first guest house to be built in the hospital's area. In 1983, the Oncology Guest House was built for cancer patients who needed a place to stay while they received treatment.

One patient wrote of his experience, "The guest house was the difference between life and death. I would not have been able to get treatment without it."

Bob Elton, director of radiation oncology at the hospital, said the house was in such demand, patients and families had to be turned away.

It was clear that more was needed, not only for oncology patients, but also for other long-term patients.

The new guest house is expected to be equally as popular, said Peter Guisti, executive director of the Celebration of Health Foundation.

SLC gas leak causes stink

By NATHAN THOMPSON
nathan@du2.byu.edu
NewsNet Staff Writer

A cloud of black smoke gathered above a Chevron gasoline refinery in north Salt Lake on Thursday morning, with associated fumes and odors causing a minor stir among local residents and students.

Chevron spokesman Walt Maguire said the smoke developed when a section of the refinery was restarted after being shut down for maintenance.

The machinery worked well for several minutes but smoke began to rise from a flame that burns to eliminate excess gas which builds up in the refinery process.

"It's a highly unusual event.
These flares burn 24 hours a day.
This time something went wrong,"
Maguire said.

The extra smoke billowed from the flares because of an undetermined cause and a strong odor resulted, he said. Many people downwind of the refinery were sick and unhappy with the smell and immediately began calling Chevron with complaints.

Salt Lake news station KSL reported that Abravanel Hall was evacuated during a special children's performance after the odor was detected.

The 1,700 children were ushered from the building along with people from the U S West Building and some buildings at the University of Utah.

Propane and butane are common gases used in barbecues and heaters, but many children and adults went to hospitals because of the smell.

Health officials said the gas does not propose any significant threat.
"We feel sincerely sorry for this taking place," Maguire said.

Nurse Marylon Wills, LPN, draws blood from Donald Vanausdal on Thursday at the new veteran's clinic in Orem. The clinic is trying to meet patients' needs with a limited staff.

Veterans' clinic open for business

By KAREN ROCHESTER

A new veterans' outreach clinic opened in Orem on Monday and already has health care appointments booked until July.

Ted Baxter, public affairs officer at the VA Medical Center in Salt Lake City, said the VA health-care system has been involved in a shift away from hospitals to outpatient clinics.

This system provides better treatment and has proven to be more cost effective, he said.

The clinic has a physician, a physician's assistant, some registered nurses and an advanced-practice registered nurse.

The physician, Andrew Juergens, works between clinics in Ogden and Orem. Juergens is not only the clinic's physician, he is also the medical director of the clinic, Baxter said.

Having only one physician at the clinic can't fully meet the demand we have, he said.

We don't have adequate capacity in Orem now to deliver the care we need to, and we recognize that, Baxter said.

Juergens will help meet the demand, but a solution is not seen in the immediate future, Baxter said.

The clinic's objective is to provide the best and most balanced care, he said.

"There is no black and white when it comes to health care," he said.

Health care is unlike anything else, Baxter said.

"We put all our trust in our care giver and would not do that with anything else, for example a car salesman," Baxter said.

The addition of a physician will reduce the waiting period to obtain an appointment, but there will still be a wait, he said.

New patients may be required to wait as long as 1 1/2 hours for their appointment, but established patients may only have to wait 10 to 15 minutes, Baxter said.

The wait comes with any health care provider and is not unique to the VA clinic, he said. Baxter said there are also VA clinics in St. George and Roosevelt, Duchesne County.

Other video stores scared by Buffs case

Associated Press

PROVO — The prosecution of Movie Buffs has made other Utah County video-store owners afraid to rent movies with sex scenes, a video distributor testified.

As many as 10 stores in Utah County pulled certain movies off their shelves after police raided Movie Buffs stores in Lehi and American Fork in 1996, Shannon Roberts testified in 4th District Court on Wednesday.

"Local video stores are frightened of this case," said Roberts, owner of Universal Video Exchange in Orem. "They don't know for sure what the law is."

Larry Peterman, former general manager of the now-defunct Movie Buffs chain, faces 15 misdemeanor counts of distributing pornography stemming from an Oct. 25, 1996, raid on the stores.

Roberts told the jury that store owners told her they had removed movies because of the raid, including R-rated films that included sexual content.

Another witness, former Movie Buffs employee Daniel Cramer, said adult films were popular at the two stores. He testified the American Fork store rented an average of 165 adult films per week, and the Lehi store 145 — about 11 percent of those stores' revenues.

That's a greater percentage of Movie Buffs' business than family or children's movies in those stores, Cramer testified.

Lehi Police Chief Karl Zimmerman testified that during licensing hearings for Movie Buffs stores in 1994, he was asked by city leaders to check out a company store in Layton.

He said he observed video boxes in an adult section of that store with covers clearly indicating that the videos were sexually explicit.

His testimony was aimed at bolstering the defense's case that Peterman had tacit approval from city officials to rent adult videos.
